The Work of the Seed Growers

The members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association have just concluded, at Oids, Alberta, their usual annual meeting.

For 38 years the professional seed growers of Canada have met together in one or another of the provinces, to discuss how best they could improve the quality and increase the quantity of true-to-variety seeds of cereals, forage grass, field, root and garden vegetable crops. Also so that the commercial crops produced by the farmers of Canada will be of higher quality and will give a higher yield per acre. The high quality seeds made available to farmers by these members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association are the carefully multiplied product of mere handfuls of most precious newly bred and selected foundation stocks placed in their hands by the scientific plant breeders of the dominion experimental farms, of the rust research laboratory and of our universities.

The high reputation enjoyed on the markets of the world by our Canadian wheat and other crops traces back directly to the painstaking, exacting and careful work—which amounts to a high degree of craftsmanship—done by the members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association.

Our Canadian seed growers, therefore, together with their associates, our scientific agriculturists, certainly deserve well of this country.

EDMONTON DISTRICT W.C.T.U. CONVENTION AT BARDO, JUNE 28th and 29th

Over roads that were anything but inviting more than two hundred people drove to attend this annual spring meeting.

Talent was there and evidence of efficiency in management encouraging for temperance workers and wisdom lead the audience, as proven at many points.

Have you seen the aprons which the four interested ladies put on during the Canada's an cities? Literally covered with recipes for cocktails. And have you learned that in a number of cases local W.C.T.U. members defeated the intention of merchants to display and sell them? It only goes to show that righteous purpose and strategic movements will reduce an enemy to a state of defeatism.

Much earnest discussion was given to the fact that our provincial and dominion government both refuse to take any steps toward limiting the manufacture or sale of intoxicating beverages, with plenty of evidence facing them that its use demoralizes and makes for inefficiency.

A feature of the evening session was a delightful silver medal contest.

In short, there were so many interesting and instructive items all through the two days program we were so royally entertained that even the absence of the had-been-expected national president was little felt.

As a tribute to her two years' chairmanship, Mrs. Thomson, of Ryley, was re-elected district president. Other officers: Mrs. Ed-wardson, 1st vice-president; Mrs. Douglas, 2nd, both of Edmonton; Mrs. McPherson, Vegreville, co-sec.; Mrs. Usher, Edmonton, rec-sec.; Mrs. Hay Ryley, treasurer; Miss Alice Broughton, Bardo, Y. sec.; Mrs. Lerbekmo, Bardo, L.T.L. sec.

Mrs. Prothero was born in London, England, her profession was that of a musician, being an accomplished violinist. She came to Alberta from England in June, 1920 and lived on the farm until her demise. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband Mr. Henry G. Prothero, and two daughters, Audrey and Joan, five brothers, and one sister living in England, besides many friends in this district.

Funeral service was held on Saturday at 2:00 p.m. from the Irma United church, Mr. Longmire officiating. Interment was made in the Irma cemetery.

Pall bearers were Mr. F. Ford, Mr. W. Kuwica, Mr. E. L. Elford, Mr. Ed. Haun, Mr. S. Thomson, and Mr. W. Mason.

Mr. Hy. G. Prothero, Irma, Alta.

Dear Mr. Prothero and Family:

We are in receipt of a letter from Mr. and Mrs. William Mason and family containing the sad news of your wife and mother's departure from this life. The above mentioned feel it would be her desire to make a gift to the work of our Home instead of a floral tribute. They have sent in the money as a donation to our work, also a memorandum to the deceased whom they highly esteemed. They desire in this way to convey to you and the bereaved ones their sincere sympathy. We are happy to know Mrs. Prothero was a Christian, and we know you will find this a great comfort in your bereavement. We join with Mr. and Mrs. Mason in conveying to you our deepest sympathy.

Yours in the Master,
C. Lister.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to all those who so kindly helped to lighten our sorrow before death and afterwards, especially those stout hearted ones who braved the elements of the weather and paid their last respects to our loved one. To Mr. Frank and George we are at a loss to find words to express our gratitude for their untiring help in our hour of need from start to finish, so we ask the higher power to do it for us by giving them health and strength in carrying out His will. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto Me." Matt. 25:40.

According to popular songstress Jane Froman, the Three B's of modern music—"Bachelorette, Boogie-Woogie and Blues"—are about to be extended to five B's, with the addition of Bounce and Bal-lade. It seems that wartime calls for a certain type of song, and bouncy rhythm and ballads like "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree" and "Johnny Doughboy Found a Rose in Ireland," are two good examples of the type of tunes that are constantly finding favor with the public.

JUNK DEALERS BEST SUITED FOR SALVAGE WORK

Ottawa, June 28—A lot of needed salvage material not reaching the market; Hon. J. T. Thomson, minister of national war services, said today, because of a baseless fear that it drifts into the hands of junk dealers and peddlers, who store it and hold it to make large profits.

Mr. Thomson's statement said: "This is contrary to the facts. In the first place these people are in this business and have been in organized business, and the men engaged in it have specialized knowledge which is essential to any successful salvage campaign. If any attempt were made to eliminate them from their place in the economic structure, it would be necessary for the government to go into this business, which would involve the employment of thousands of people who would have to be trained before they could adequately do this job. Any such move would create a chaotic condition."

LEST WE FORGET!

By Jack M. Collins, Meeting reek.

O'er prairie farms sleek bombers fly.

And who hear them passing by
No longer lift a curious eye
Nor pause from humble chore;
Their snarling drone brings us no dread,

As peaceful sleep we seek in bed,
Relaxed, contented, warm, well-fed;

What know we of a war?

Why should we heed those rushing wings,
Our minds are filled with other things,

Discussing cabbages and kings
Around the village store;

Our tranquil path through life we walk,
The yield of wheat, the price of pork,

Have more import than distant talk
And mutterings of war.

But rushing wings bring dread alarms
To distant Britons on their farms;

They carry on in spite of qualms
Midst bombs' exploding roar;

Their courage neither shrinks nor cools;
They play the game, observe the rules;

Their only plea, "Send us the tools!"

"We shield from this war."

"Send us the tools," is all they ask.
Can we indifference snugly bask,

Indifferent to our nation's task,
Our Empire's need ignore?

Or shall, united and steadfast,
We give our all in effort vast,

'Til Nazi spawn, o'erwhelmed,
Aghast!

Are purged for evermore.

BANK OF MONTREAL CROP REPORT No. 3

In the prairie provinces, good rains have fallen in most districts, with the heaviest precipitation in those areas most requiring it and prospects generally are quite promising. Cool wet weather has retarded growth and higher temperatures are now required. Wheat averages eight to nine inches in height and coarse grains six inches with plants generally well rooted and healthy. Early wheat is developing shot-blade. Frost at scattered points has injured flax and rye. Insect damage has been slight, weather having held grasshoppers in check. Pastures are in good condition. In Quebec, recent heavy rains, while beneficial generally, have caused considerable damage to crops on low lands. Growth of grains, roots and other crops is, however, satisfactory and the crop outlook on the whole remains favorable. There is ample beneficial. In Ontario, rainfall during the past month has hindered farming operations and caused some damage to spring-seeded crops, particularly on low lands. Fall wheat, hay and clover crops and pastures are in excellent condition. In the maritime provinces, heavy rains have been fairly general, and while some resulting damage is reported, crop conditions are favorable and the season is about two weeks earlier than usual. In British Columbia all field crops are late, and continuous rains have reduced the yield of the strawberries to much below average. Grain, fruit and vegetable crops give good promise, but warm, sunny weather is needed.

ALBERTA—Crop conditions generally are satisfactory. While growth has been backward, owing to continued cool weather, wheat has stood well and shows a healthy stand. Moisture supplies are adequate for the present. Damage from pests and other sources is moderate but heavy growth of weeds is reported. Sugar beets are progressing favorably.

GROWN IN SUNNY, SOUTHERN ONTARIO

Dominion Day

AS ANOTHER anniversary of the founding of our Dominion passes into history, Canadians may feel with pride that the hopes and visions of the men who brought about Confederation have been fulfilled. At no time in the seventy-five years since Confederation have world-shaking events been recorded in such quick succession as they have in this year. As a full-fledged nation, beside other freedom loving peoples of the world, Canada has taken her place in the grim struggle to maintain the principles on which our national unity is based. Freedom of speech, freedom of religion, the advancement of learning and the right of everyone to enjoy the privileges of a free citizen, these are the things which Canadians have always known and enjoyed and for which they are fighting to maintain.

A Milestone In History

The passing of this milestone in the history of our country finds Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen in many parts of the world; in England, in Libya, Malta and Hong Kong. Many of them are guarding our own coasts. On farms and in factories across the country, workers are producing supplies for our armed forces and for those of our Allies. Because of our fortunate geographic position and the watchful eye of the British Navy, we have so far been spared the horror of having war actually reach our shores. There have been submarines in the St. Lawrence River and some Japanese planes near the coast of Alaska, but as yet only those in our armed forces and their families have felt in any great degree, the real hardship of war.

Must Face The Future

The extra taxes, the rations and shortages of some commodities which we have experienced have affected our lives, but we as yet know nothing of the sacrifice and effort made by the people of England, Russia and China, or the horrors experienced by those living in the occupied countries. Canada has at the moment internal problems. There have been others in the past and there will doubtless be more in the future. Understanding and breadth of outlook by all those living in the Dominion, are essential in solving these problems. As they have risen to face and solve the many difficulties in building up the war effort, so Canadians must face and solve their internal difficulties. As we begin another year of our national life, we in Canada have much for which to be thankful, and many achievements to make us proud, and to give us courage to face the future.

Tried Camouflage

But Dummy Furnaces In Essen Did Not Deceive R.A.F.

German camouflage experts, fearful of raids on Essen, were revealed to have built many dummy blast furnaces some distance from Essen's main targets in an effort to deceive enemy raiders.

Joseph W. Grigg, Jr., former United Press manager in Berlin, who arrived in London after five months internment in Germany, said that the "ersatz" targets were built at Essen in the same manner that dummy "Berlins" were constructed.

"The blast furnaces of the Ruhr Valley, including those at Essen, Dortmund and Gelsenkirchen, were visible for miles at night because their flaming smokestacks were perfect beacons for bombers," Grigg said.

"To guard against this the Germans constructed a large number of dummy blast furnaces, belching smoke and flames at night like the real ones in an attempt to deceive the R.A.F. bombers."

Money From Salvage

Nova Scotia Fishermen Were Paid Nice Sum For Work

Goods salvaged from a merchant ship which ran aground off Nova Scotia netted fishermen $25,000, H. N. M. Stanbury, provincial salvage organizer, said. Tons of lard, in cases, barrels and floating free on the surface like miniature ice floes, were garnered by the fishermen, in addition to tires and war supplies of many kinds. One fisherman alone, it was reported, received $1,549 in salvage tolls for his few weeks' work.

The Individual Citizen's Army

A Weekly Column About This And That In The Canadian Army.
By Alan Maurice Irwin

National unity is a term that has been loosely, often much too loosely, interpreted to mean the interrelation of English and French speaking Canadians. So generally accepted has this interpretation become that most of us seem to have forgotten that national unity is non-existent so long as the tribulations of Canadians in any of the provinces are not shared by Canadians in the other provinces.

What prompts this sermonizing is the recent flurry over the reduction of the gasoline rationing unit in the Maritime Provinces from five gallons to two due to a shortage which may have disappeared. There was a perfectly natural feeling down east that it was not fair that Maritimers should be on "short commons" when drivers in the other six provinces still could obtain their full ration.

Ottawa answered by pointing out reasons that fully justified the reduction.

All of this is a preamble to the charge that we are failing to live up to our privilege of serving in the ranks of the Individual Citizen's Army.

How?

It should be obvious!

Have we in the central and western parts of the country any moral right to five gallons of gasoline when because of transportation or any other difficulties, fellow privates in our behind the lines army—who are much closer to actual warfare and potential attack—have to be reduced to two gallons.

Why, if there is true national unity we do not spare the public embarrassment of Ministers we employ to govern us by voluntarily reducing our consumption of gasoline to the lowest level forced upon any geographical section of the Dominion?

Citizens of countries where "verboten" is a familiar word tend to regard accounts of our provincial differences, accounts that are magnified to the point of making some of us appear to be "oppressed minorities," when such stories are published. But the fact that such stories are published is the fault of the citizens who fail to give the lead to those they have set in authority.

We cheerfully and voluntarily ration ourselves in the use of tea, coffee, and sugar. Why not ration ourselves in the use of gasoline? If we can drink our fewer cups of tea and coffee unsweetened why can't we walk a mile or two and save the gasoline we would have used for war uses?

Across this country from coast to coast business experts are devoting their talents to the working out of a system of price and supply control that will spare us the horrors of inflation and maintain stocks of essential war goods for our fighting forces. Some of these men serve without pay, the others—away from their normal occupations—sacrifice the normal advancements and promotions they could expect if they stayed in their own jobs.

These men don't enjoy restricting and controlling their neighbours—it takes a Nazi mentality to enjoy that sort of thing—and they welcome action on the part of Canadians that makes their work easier.

Why can't we then, who are all out to win the war in the best way we can, make rationing and control unnecessary. Surely we can stint ourselves for the common good!

The soldier who leaves a $150 a month job to volunteer to serve in uniform (in the case of a single man) a little more than half of that amount has voluntarily rationed himself much more severely than we have been called upon.

Sugar, tea, coffee, gasoline and tires, as this is written, are the only rationed commodities. It's funny how some of them tie in with each other. The use of less sugar reduces the "spare tires" some of us carry around. The use of less gasoline increases the life of "spare tires" we cannot replace.

Have you joined the Reserve Army yet? Encouraging signs are visible in some parts of the country since this workable body was set up to give those ineligible for active service overseas a chance to train themselves for home defence but I have not heard any commanding officer say yet that he can't handle any more recruits.

That's another branch of the Individual Citizen's Army!

There are no "national" holidays in the United States. Each state has jurisdiction over the holidays to be observed.

Conditions On Jap Ships

Living Quarters So Crowded Disease Is Prevalent Among Troops

The Communist newspaper New China Daily News published an article said to have been written by a Japanese prisoner of war declaring that "poor nutrition and sleeping quarters more than counter-balance the heavier guns and higher speed of Japanese warships."

"Most Japanese sailors are crowded on lower decks," the article said. "Japanese naval officers scoff at American and British warships as tourist boats, but the Japanese seamen have no love for their own slave rumers."

For example, more than 1,000 out of 1,500 members of the crew of the Japanese battleship Hyuga (completed in 1918) were housed on lower decks in bunks which take up even the passages. The sailors sleep rubbing shoulders with each other. The foul air causes a number of diseases, mostly pleurisy and weak lungs.

A number of collisions, groundings and explosions aboard Japanese warships resulted from decreased efficiency caused by the poor living conditions, the article stated. It said known instances included a collision of the Hyuga and a submarine off Western Japan and an explosion aboard a cruiser of the Myoka class. The Japanese navy has a dread of air attacks, the article added, because most of the deck armor has been sacrificed for more guns and higher speed.

CHAPTER XXVII

Tamar knew that as long as she lived she would never forget her experience in the cabin at the foot of the mountain. After a meal of fried potatoes, corn bread and slabs of canned meat, which Louis had prepared, she washed the dishes. Louis sat by the fireplace and watched her. Tamar had eaten slowly, a little of this and a bite of that to keep up her strength. Her hands trembled and she dropped the heavy coffee cup and broke it. The heavy liquid spreading on the wide floor.

"Nervous, eh? I'm surprised that you society dames don't know how to handle any situation with calmness and poise. Now, you take Thesee—she'd be perfectly at home—give her this place or your own drawing room."

Tamar knew that he was teased and pleased with his great idea and the success with which he so far had in carrying it out. She had haltingly written the note to her father. "I am safe and unharmed. The place I am in is comfortable." Louis had quoted the words to her and she tried wildly to think of something to put into it to make her father know that she was unafraid.

"Make yourself comfortable. Miss Randolph," Louis said, mockingly gracious. "There's magazines and cigarettes in the guest room. Help yourself."

Tamar went directly into the bedroom and closed the door. There was the key in the lock and she turned it.

Louie laughed. "That would certainly burn Thesee up! She'll probably tell your pretty white throat. I'll tell her that you thought your charms were irresistible."

across her lips to keep her from crying. Her face turned a deep crimson and she looked wildly at the only opening in the room, a small window. She could see that it was tightly shuttered and that it was hopelessly impossible to consider escape through it.

Even if she could get out of the cabin, where could she go? She knew that the cold night air and the wildness of the countryside were as formidable as Louis himself. The lamp that Louis had provided her with was turned low on a table beside the bed. The chimney was smoked and had the appearance of neglect. The room was cold and she longed for Louis's Thesee.

"You'll find some night clothes in the dresser. Help yourself."

I'll not touch a thing! Tamar thought with disgust. This jacket she had put on only at his insistence, and it had looked clean and new. She looked at the bed. It seemed comfortable. Were the coverings and sheets clean? She hesitantly investigated, turning back the heavy spread.

"Clean sheets and covers are on the shelves," Louie's voice caused her to jump. She had a feeling that he could see every move that she made. Underneath the spread the mattress was bare. It had been stripped of everything. Again, Tamar had the impression that the place was cared for. As though the lines had been taken away to be laundered. She decided to make the best of the situation and walked over to a cupboard. Opening it, she found a pile of clean sheets, pillow cases, towels and heavy wool blankets of pastel colors. The feminine influence, she thought. The labels were still on some, proving they had never been used and she withdrew two of them.

"Get out some stuff for me, Sis, I'll take the living-room couch, thank you."

Tamar's figure grew taut. So she would have to open her door once more? The feeling of safety which had slipped over her as she turned the key a moment before now disappeared.

"Hurry up in there. I'm tired. I've got a big day ahead of me. And you can lock the door if you like. The shutter's nailed down and I'm pulling the couch across your door, so you can't get out. Of course, I think you'll be sensible, though, and not think of going into the wilderness outside. You couldn't get away, even if it was day."

Tamar pulled down some more linen and covers. She could hear him removing his boots and heard them drop to the floor. "We'll get some sleep tonight. Hand me those things."

He grinned at her as she thrust her hand through the opening in the doorway. She closed the door and locked it once more. What would tomorrow bring to her? she wondered. She opened the chest and looked for pajamas.

Thesee has fairly good taste, she thought. A pile of lingerie greeted her eyes. Satin gowns and pajamas in tearose and blues, jersey, lacy, long pajamas, bathrobes and lightweight corduroy. All new.

Tamar chose the warmest looking of them all. She stripped off her slacks and green sweater, and in another moment was looking in the glass at her reflection. She was laughing wildly. She was still sane enough to care how she looked. She should be down on her knees giving thanks for this Thesee, who was influential enough to manage Louie's actions by some kind of remote control.

It seemed hours before Tamar could stop shaking and really feel warm and relaxed. She drifted off to a fitful nap about daybreak, only to awaken and toss again. She could hear Louie's heavy snoring in the next room, and having heard him pull the studio couch in front of her door, knew she could not hope to get out.

The intense cold had sharpened during the night and she pulled the blankets up over her head. In her next few minutes' slumber, she raced about the meadows of Shadwell on Madcap, with Ranny before her galloping Tahnahhahs II. They quarreled over who had won the race, and Rhoebe settled it with a big slice of gingerbread, warm from their oven. Tamar's mother called down the big stairs and they had gone up hand in hand to sit by her side while she told them the story of "Red Riding Hood."

Tamar said, "But, Mamma, we're grown up now." Marie smiled at them and said, "Yes, but there's always a wild hiding somewhere." Ranny jumped at her, then, and Tamar screamed wildly, for as she hurried herself down the stairs, the one who followed her was the old, teasing, laughing Ranny, but Louis, with fangs bared!

"Roly mackerel! Shut up!" shouted Louie. "What's the matter, did you hear a mouse?"

THE WILSON FLY PAD CO., HAMILTON, ONT.

She could see a light under the crack in the door and knew he had lit the lamp. "Ho hum! Time to get up. How'd you sleep, Princess?" She could hear him moving about. Heard the snapping of kindlings in the fireplace. "I'll make us a little coffee, Mummy. Hope you're more sociable today."

Tamar remained silent. So Louie wanted to be sociable? And he was feeling very good this morning over the prospect of the day. How would he get the note to her father? And how could he bring Thesee here without leaving her alone?

Tamar thought wildly about Shadwell. Her dream had been so vivid, and her remembering that of her mother had dried at Louie's ridiculous attempt to banter. What would Ranny be doing about her? She knew that he would never stop searching. Dear Ranny, She loved him so. She wished achingly for a sight of him and her father and mother again together on the terrace at home.

Fleeting days that pass so rapidly that we don't take time to appreciate them, she thought. A year ago I worried about money, but I had a wealth in love and association that was too good to last.

"Shall I fix your tray, Princess, or would you care to come out like just folks and cat with me?" Louie called as he walked toward the kitchen.

Tamar did not answer.

"Oh, well, you can cook your own breakfast! I'll make us some coffee, but you gotta fry your own eggs."

The odor of bacon and coffee presently. "Get up, Princess! Hurry up, or I'll come in and pull you out of your downy couch. I've got work to do today."

Tamar slid out of the bed and dressed with trembling fingers. She heard the couch being slipped away from the door and the sharp voice of Louie: "I've left you some grub. No more fooling, come on now."

She turned the key and opened the door. The big room was lit from the burning logs, and she thought reluctantly, it looked cosy! "I'll bring your plate in here for you. You can wash up there in the kitchen."

To be in such a dangerous situation, it was ridiculous to feel as safe as she did. Tamar came back to the fire and sat down on a low stool. "I knew I've never entertained as beautiful a host in my life," Louie said admiringly.

Tamar blushed. She was lovely there in the firelight, her hair curling about her white face, but her eyes were deep with fright and worry. She was thinner than she had been for years.

"However," Louie went on placidly, "I like 'em plumper!"

Tamar ate the bacon and egg and drank her coffee black.

"Thanks," she said, "and now, please listen. If you'll get me back to civilization, I'll forget everything about this little adventure. You've still got a chance to call quits."

Louie jumped up in amazement. "You little fool! Just because I've been decent to you, don't think I'm not moaning business!"

Tamar said quietly, "I warn you, if a certain man ever gets his hands on you, it will be just too bad."

Louie threw back his head and laughed uproariously.

Trip To The Moon

Could Be Made In 45 Hours According To Plans

The British Interplanetary Society recently revealed that it had drawn up plans for a 1,512-ton rocket-driven space ship which, it claimed, could make the 238,855 miles to the moon in about 45 hours on 1,150 tons of solid fuel.

Passengers in pressure suits equipped with air-regeneration apparatus would be landed on the moon from airlocks on each side of the craft. On the return trip the space machines would use a giant parachute as an air brake after it entered the earth's atmosphere.

Every Three Seconds

Army Greatcoats Is Completed In Factory At Leeds

Army greatcoats use up 40 miles of cloth and lining a week in a single Leeds factory where one garment is completed every three seconds. This workshop and another which has turned out 320,000 battledresses a week are using every week enough cotton to go three times around the equator. These are only two of the 250 tailoring firms who were given the largest single clothing order ever placed—for 5,000,000 battledresses, blouses and 6,000,000 trousers. That meant 5,000 miles of cloth, absorbing 10,000 tons of wool; 9,000 miles of lining, and 200,000,000 brass buttons. A week later, 1,150,000 army greatcoats were ordered, calling for 7,000,000 yards of the heavy milled waterproofed cloth specially produced for the purpose by the Yorkshire mills, who blend six different colors of wool to make the perfect khaki. In six months the overcoats produced from Yorkshire cloth would have provided 25 years' supply in normal times.

Cereal Substance

Claimed Superior To Alcohol For Making Synthetic Rubber

Investigations are being conducted by the National Research Council into the production of a substitute for natural rubber which may prove superior to alcohol in the manufacture of butadiene, an important element in manufacture of synthetic rubber. It was revealed in a return tabled in Commons.

The return was made for Dr. G. Fauteux (Lib., Montreal-St. Marys), who asked whether scientific investigations have been carried on as to the possibility of using Canadian-grown cereals to produce butadiene. Alcohol, which can be converted to butadiene, can be produced from cereals by recognized fermentation methods, the return said, but investigation now is being conducted along other lines.

Staffed By Women

More Girl Employees In Canadian Banks Than Ever Before

In probably no industry or business have women taken the place of men in such numbers as in Canadian banks. "Women represent 50 per cent of our staffs and the number is still increasing," is the report from most banks. More and more women replacements are expected. There isn't a "youngster" left, that is, a single male between 18 and 26 or so, in any of the country's banks, unless he's been classed as physically unfit by military authorities. Right now there are more girl employees in banks than ever before. It doesn't take much calculating to see that when things get back to normal, and men take over their old jobs, that there are going to be a lot of girls who'll know all about how books are balanced. An official of the Royal Bank says that when the war started the war with 1,250 men and 300 women in our Ontario branches. At the end of April, this year, we had 850 men, and something like 835 women. Many of the girls are tellers, and some are acting as assistant accountants.

Warmer weather will probably bring less business as great profusion as ever. It is obvious how important it is, then, to guard against infantile diseases and other diseases often caused by flies, which pick up the deadly contagious germs on manure heaps, exposed garbage and other favorite breeding places.

Health authorities rightly warn against allowing flies to enter the home or the store, where they deposit filthy bacteria (which may number 5,000,000 for a single fly) on food, drink and even little babies sleeping in their cribs.

The importance of this cannot be over-emphasized, but to destroy flies before they get in their deadly work is, obviously, the sure solution, as it eliminates the extraordinary prolific breeding capacity of the common house fly. The sure solution, as it is very generally conceded that Wilson's Fly Pads offer a rapid, safe and cleanly method of killing all the flies. Just a few pads in the right place, at the right time, will do the trick. In war days, the keeping up of a nation's morale is greatly aided by protecting health and anything that helps to exterminate flies, helps to do this.

Incidentally, Wilson's Fly Pads work wonders in destroying ants, too, which are destructive, annoying pests, indoors and outdoors.

EARLY-CANADIAN RAG RUG EASY TO WEAVE

Wet In Bright Cotton Strips

Charming this early Canadian rug with color in variegated effect! You'll love weaving it—in a cool summery combination of blue, rust and ivory.

Here's how to do it. Tear cotton fabric (cast-off dresses, napkins, etc.) into strips 2½ inches wide. Press down ½ inch on each side and fold again through the middle. Prepare also some "filler," 1-inch strips of rag which you'll use to start weaving and will later remove.

Now, in a home-made wooden frame 28 by 40 inches, drive in nails about ½ inch apart on short sides. To set up your warp, of rust candlewick yarn, tie one end to your frame and carry up and down over alternate nails.

Next weave 2½ inches of "filler," going over and under warp threads, and weave 7 rows of rust candlewick for a heading.

OUR NATIVE SPRUCE AND PINE

As the war demands become greater and more exacting, the drain on our lumber for war purposes is causing no little inconvenience. Coast fir is practically out as far as the prairies are concerned. Fir veneer is all absorbed by war industries. So now we must turn to our own native products, and owing to the heavy demand this is hard to get just at present. We were fortunate in having buyers long-sighted enough to foresee these conditions and we are happy to say we will have plenty of spruce and pine for your wants this fall. Come and see us. We will be prepared to supply your needs.
